The school admits students to its on campus and online master's programs once a year, for fall semester. Priority consideration, including consideration for departmental scholarships, is given to applications received by the fall deadline. Applications are accepted until March 1. After March 1, interested applicants should contact the department to ask if a late application can still be considered.

Students from any geographical location (including Madison, Wisconsin) are welcome to apply. Online students cannot take face to face courses.

For more information on the Information School MA program, including detailed admissions instructions, read the program admission (<https://ischool.wisc.edu/programs/ma-library-information-studies/ma-lis-admission/>) page.

The Graduate School requires a bachelor's degree from a regionally accredited US institution, or a comparable degree from an international institution. A minimum undergraduate grade-point average (GPA) of 3.00 (on a 4.00 scale) in the last 60 earned credit hours is required.

Application evaluation criteria include academic abilities, professional promise, leadership and community engagement. An undergraduate program that includes breadth in liberal arts and sciences is required. Any major is acceptable. Prior work experience related to information professions is useful but is not required.
