

INDIVIDUAL MAJOR, BS

The Individual Major in the College of Letters & Science is a method of fulfilling the depth requirement for students whose interests bridge existing departments and disciplines in ways not accommodated by an existing major. The Individual Major must consist of a coherent pattern of courses in more than one department or recognized interdisciplinary program in the College of Letters & Science and must be approved by a committee of appropriate faculty from the College of Letters & Science.

Getting approval to pursue an Individual Major is never guaranteed. Thus, students should discuss alternative majors with their academic advisors and be willing to pursue them. Students interested in learning more about the Individual Major should contact L&S Undergraduate Academic Deans' Services to set up an appointment with the coordinator for the Individual Major prior to starting this process.
